

Why I like dinosaurs

Adesh Sundaesan age 8

On my first visit to the Natural History Museum I walked in and saw a magnificent creature standing in front of me. Of course it wasn't alive but when I first took a glance at it, it seemed to interest me. There in front of me was a giant skeleton of an herbivorous dinosaur called Diplodocus. It had a long neck which was around 24 metres. My next stop was at the Veloceraaptor pit. It had a life like model of an Iguanodon being hunted by several Raptors. On either side were large models of other dinosaurs. Lastly I came upon the great Tyrannosaurus rex.

I like dinosaurs because it fascinates me that millions of years ago these big creatures lived on our planet Earth and that they would still be alive if it hadn't been for the disastrous comet.
